Of the three listed, the one listed as "fighting caravans" is not, in my experience, a good copy. The video is very jerky and sound is poorly synchronized. The one with the suffix "#632" or "1931" play very well. Don't know what is wrong but maybe someone familiar with the problems I described could figure this out. I'm using W7, 4 g's RAM and a dual processor so I don't think hard stuff is the ...

Fighting Caravans was never a band; it was an open wound, and it is now time for that wound to heal. We're all incredibly proud of everything we've achieved over the past few years and, despite all the difficulties we've faced as an independent outfit, are happy that with the unique spot in the musical landscape that we've managed to carve out for ourselves.
